The prophecy is of someone who can be killed without being harmed, who will bring peace. He will be forced to battle an evil emperor, fight witches, and save the princess of Oz, Dorothy, from the clutches of the evil witch, . . . The new Wizard of Oz movie doesn't open until the summer of 2015. You will see it in theaters. One hopes that this film is an improvement over the rather ridiculous original film, and hopes that the new cast will do the film and the characters more justice. But there's no way to tell, since this is an old clip from the film. I'm a bit confused about the flying monkeys. Obviously the flying monkeys are an allegory to that of the Witches of Oz. In the book the flying monkeys were a new sort of wizard of Oz who opposed the old wizard, . . . The original flying monkeys were given by the old wizard, so it seems that in this movie the flying monkeys are also given by him, and thus an allegory to the new Wizard. I have no idea if the new movie will use this allegory, though. I'm a little leery of the new film because some of the characters have been changed. I hope that they have the character development needed to pull this off, but it doesn't look good. It isn't fair to judge a new movie so early, but I'm a little skeptical about the flying monkeys as the new villains. The Flying Monkeys were a pretty big part of the original movie, as a sort of allegory of the Witches. As for the movie, I have some ideas, but I have no clue how it will turn out. Well, I haven't seen the movie in a while, but I don't think they will have flying monkeys again. They were in the original film, and the book. They weren't in the song, but I'm pretty sure they're not in the movie either. I think the book is going to be more of the character development than the movie. Ok, now I've seen the movie. I wasn't a fan of the original, and this new version isn't any better. The major difference is that they aren't flying monkeys at all, but something else. They don't attack anyone, and they're hardly even in the movie. They're in the first 30 seconds or so of the movie, and then vanish. And they aren't villains. I can't help but 82157476af
